Element Of Strike Unlikely

NEW YORK (AP)—An early element of the longshoremen's strike has shut down ports along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts today.

The New York Shipping Assn. will not meet with the International Longshoremen's Assn.
today. The union says its members will not return to the job until it has a new contract.
The strike is costing 20 million dollars a day.
H. Moore, deputy director of Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, plans to meet separately with each side but has indicated the immediate possibility of mediating them to meet jointly.

A strike of about 85,000 longshoremen from Searsport, Maine, to Galveston, Texas, has tied up operations on about 200 ships. The strike developed Thursday in Southern ports and quickly spread northward.

The New York Shipping Assn., which represents 170 steamship lines and contracting stevedores, has offered a 15-day extension of its contract that expired Sept.
15. It also had agreed that any new contract would be retroactive.

The association's contracts with the longshoremen traditionally set a pattern for agreements between regional employer groups and the South and ILA locals there.
The longshoremen said they would not accept retroactive provisions in their new contracts.

The strike followed to show solidarity in the South and ILA locals there.

QUACHITA PRESBYTERY OFFICERS — These are the officers elected last week to serve the Quachita Presbytery. They are, left, Vice President Gordon Bayless, Hope, Western Division; Paul Gurdin; Vice President, George Holden, El Dorado, Central Division; and Vice President Merrill Stark, Warren, Eastern Division. The men of the Church from about ten cities met at the First Presbyterian Church in Magnolia last Thursday night for their Fall Rally. Joe W. Clement Jr., of Pine Bluff was the feature speaker.

Garland Club Holds First Meeting

The Sprouts Garden Club of Garland School met for the first time this school term on Wednesday, September 30th, in the school auditorium. The newly elected president, Gordon Bayless, introduced the other officers of the club
as follows: Vice president, Mike Turner, Secretary, Amelia Gaines, Song leader, Lynn Russell, Reporter, Sue King, and Librarian, Brenda Buine. The club members joined in saying the Lord's Prayer, and were led in repeating the Junior Gardener's Pledge by the vice president. The secretary read the constitution and by-laws of the club, and Mrs. M. B. Hatch introduced the speakers Mrs. Lyle McMahon, Mrs. T. P. Foster, and Mrs. Sam Huckabee who gave the children information on the Fall Flower Show to be held in October.
Demonstrations were given in flower arranging and cookies were served by the group with Mrs. Hatch at the piano. The club will meet each third Wednesday of the month and members are the pupils of the two sixth grades. Susan Rogers and

Death of Youth, 14, to Be Commuted

OTTAWA (AP)—Prime Minister John Diefenbaker indicated Thursday night that the death sentence of Steven Truscott, 14, convicted of the rape-killings of a 13-year-old girl, will be commuted.

The youth was convicted in Godorich, Ont., Wednesday and sentenced to be hanged Dec. 11.
The jury recommended mercy but the death sentence is mandatory in murder convictions. Any appeal must come from the federal Cabinet.

No one as young as Truscott has been convicted of murder in Canada since 1875. At that time, a 14-year-old Indian received the death penalty but the sentence was commuted to life imprisonment.

Truscott was accused of the rape-murder of Lynn Harper, daughter of an officer at the Clinton air force station near here. The boy was the son of a warrior officer at the base, and the two children were playmates.

Justice R. L. Ferguson prohibited publication of the trial testimony because of Truscott's age but witnesses at a preliminary hearing told of seeing Truscott and the girl together on a bicycle June 9, the day she vanished. One witness said he saw the boy returning alone a half hour later.

The girl's partly nude body was found in the woods some two days later.

Algerian Against DeGaulle's Policy

ALGERIA (AP)—Deputy Pierre la Gaillarde, leader of an extreme rightist group, said today he will try to push a motion through the French National Assembly condemning President Charles de Gaulle's Algerian policy.

He said in an interview he is sure of support from at least 54 other deputies. "Enough to form a nucleus of opposition."

Paris political sources, however, doubted that such a motion could get the signatures of even the 10 per cent of the deputies—53—required to bring it to debate.

La Gaillarde's faction and other French rightists in Algeria have feared he will negotiate peace with the Algerian rebels who have been fighting for independence for five years.

Bids Taken on Colony Buildings

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The National Construction Co. of Conway yesterday submitted the apparent low bid on a contract to build three new buildings at the Arkansas Children's Colony (for mentally retarded children) at Conway.
The bid was for $288,400.

State Purchasing Agent Mack Sturgis said this was more than was available for the work and he would seek approval from the Nabholz firm and the two others that submitted bids to eliminate some items in the contract.

He said if this didn't work he would re-advertise for bids.
Sturgis said only about $200,000 was available for the work, which includes constructing two new colleges to house 64 children and a combination storage and training building.

Paralytic Polio Cases Total 304

WASHINGTON (AP)—Para-

DOROTHY DIX

Should Girl, 14, Give Up Boy So He Can Win Championship?

By DOROTHY DIX

Dear Dorothy Dix: My parents are just wonderful about letting me date. Most girls my age (14) can't. I met the most wonderful boy at a party this summer and we started dating. Soon we were going steady. When we went back to school he went into training. You see, he's the boxing champion of our school. He lost three fights, and finally suggested that we stop going steady. He said it was interfering with his training. I said I thought it would be wise to break up altogether, dating occasionally. Anyway, it is a bit too young for steady dating. Did I do right?—Debbie

Dear Debbie: You did the right thing, for the two reasons stated. Dating and training are at odds, and for the honor of the school, it's a good thing to let training win. You'll find, too, that you'll have more fun with a bit more freedom. Learn more about the male sex in general before you concentrate on one member of it for keeps. Lots of luck to you and the boxer.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Celia is a charming girl and I've dated her so long it's about time I made up my mind whether to marry her or not. She has every asset a man could want in a wife, and one drawback. She talks too much, and on occasion she babbles so much I've actually become bored with her. The truth is, I'm a great talker, too, but she won't let me get a word in edgewise.—Wally

Dear Wally: Better look for a demure, quiet girl who'll be contented by the sound of your voice, and let Celia choose a strong, silent man who adores listening, but hates to talk. If you get bored at this stage, think how horrible marriage would be. You'd come home full of juicy business gossip, and you'd be set down to detailed descriptions of Celia's hard day at the handloom, or what happened to the price of pork.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My fiancé and I are of different faiths. We do not argue about it because we are both sensible people. The idea of one giving up his religion for the other is out of the question.

Few Sightseers
Bother President

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP)—Relatively few sightseers have shown up so far at President Eisenhower's Desert White House, possibly because it's not too easy to find.

Except for several official cars parked out front, George E. Allen's winter home looks like all other luxury houses in the area. You can easily overlook it.

But every now and then a knowledgeable motorist with family or friends in the car will approach the house, and either stop and look from a distance or drive slowly past.

There actually isn't much to see from the road: a high wall, the tile roof, a cluster of ornamental palm trees, the mountain behind and — through the gateway — a corner of the front porch.

The Santa Rosa Mountains, which rim the La Quinta Valley on three sides, add to the feeling of seclusion and serve to protect the area from the brisk winds that periodically stir up the sand elsewhere.

THE POWER OF PREACHING

By WILLIAM E. GILROD, D.D.
When I went from college to begin my ministry, many years ago in the Canadian backwoods, in the region between Georgian Bay and Lake Huron known as the Saugeen Indian Peninsula, a region then wild, but which has become a popular summer resort. I look with me a little, red-covered book, which was destined to have a great influence upon my life and ministry.

It was Principal Tulloch's "Religious Thoughts in Britain in the Nineteenth Century." Somewhere I had picked it up for a nickel as a "publisher's remainder," and I had never previously opened it. An interesting and important book in itself, its impact upon me was the statement that "Robertson of Brighton," a minister of whom I had never even heard, was the greatest preacher of the century.

I found that the Rev. Frederic D. Robertson, a Church of England minister, of Brighton, England, dying at the early age of 37, had left notes and manuscripts which seven volumes had been published, and I was anxious to know upon what Tulloch had based his praise.

At the village of Lion's Head, my nearest contact with "civilization," I found a scholarly Presbyterian minister who had the volumes in his library. A generous soul, he loaned me these two at a time, and I have formerly told in this column of the thrilling experience with which I delved into the sermons, especially into the first sermon on "God's Revelation of Heaven."

When I referred to Robertson's sermons some time ago I suggested that interested readers might probably find them in local libraries. Mrs. J. G. Crisp, of Kermitt, Tex., wrote me that it was not in the local library, and asked where it could be procured.

My own seven volumes, in one comparatively large book, was published by Harper Brothers, of New York, in 1886. I have not inquired whether it is still in print. As the sermons were in my heart and life, rather than on my bookshelves, I have sent my copy to Mrs. Crisp, with the suggestion that if she does not wish to retain it she might pass it on to others, or put it in the local library.

If it should be out of print, I venture a suggestion. During the years that my editorial work in Boston occasioned frequent visits to New York I spent many happy times browsing along the second-hand bookstores in lower Fourth Avenue. I believe there is an Association of Fourth Ave. Booksellers, which means a great aggregation of available books to which inquiries could be addressed. Many out-of-print books are there.

To get back to Robertson of Brighton, it is over a hundred years since the great preacher died. The a. m. e. the immense circulation of his sermons, and the voice long-dead, and the continuing influence, all suggest the power of preaching.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am not married to the father of my four children, but we lived together for seven years. Six months ago he left me, and took up with another woman. I've spoken to her but she tells me I have no claim on him and she'll take him if she wants to. I still like him. If he wants to come back, should I take him, or let her have him?—Martha D.

Dear Martha: You are cooking up problems that don't exist. It's extremely unlikely that the man will want to come back to you, and the other woman seems to have snatched him, so it's not up to you to LET her have him. She's got him. It's hard enough for some married women to hang on to a husband but if you neglect to stake a claim via a wedding ceremony, you are completely out of luck when wanderlust strikes. Unless your state has some protection for you as a common-law wife, you can't even ask support for yourself. See a lawyer and find out how much protection your children have.

Ex-Clerk Receives a Suspended Sentence

HARRISON, Ark. (AP)—Miss Leslie Williams, former Boone county circuit clerk, has received a suspended sentence on a charge of embezzling about $2,800 in public funds.

Miss Williams changed a former plea of innocent to one of no contest.

Circuit Judge Woody Murray then sentenced her to five years imprisonment and suspended the sentence.

The action was recommended by Prosecutor John Driver, who said Miss Williams had repaid the shortage.

Miss Williams recently received a suspended sentence on a federal charge of failing to file income tax returns.

You're willing to take boxing lessons and surprise him with a swift uppercut the next time he strikes? I'm sure all readers will agree with me.

Send your problem to DOROTHY DIX. Be sure to include a stamped, self-addressed envelope and address her care of this newspaper.

Bobcats Lose to Ouachita By 21-6

By TEDDY JONES JR.

Hope Star Sportswriter

The Hope Bobcats lost in a hard fought battle to the tune of 21 to 6 to the Lions of Ouachita Parish High School of Monroe, La., at Hammond Stadium last night.

After a grueling scoreless first half, with the Cats and Lions battling on even terms, the Ouachita Parish gladiators of Coach Bob Ellen broke the game wide open with a 60 yard touchdown drive the first time they got the ball in the third quarter and stepped out in front 7 to 0.

Minutes later Eddie King brought the hometown partisans to their feet with a 45 yard touchdown scamper for the Bobcats to put them within a point of the Lions when extra point failed.

The second half was sprinkled with long runs, intercepted passes, bruising line smashes, and wide open football by both teams that kept the fans at a high pitch.

Eddie King, Terry Don Thurman, and Byron Smiley rooled off sizeable dashes for the Cats while Quarterback Bobby Hendrix, FB Woody Mahoney and HB Ted Smith of the Lions were doing likewise for the visitors.

Following King's touchdown for Hope, Harry Crow, defensive right linebacker of the Lions, intercepted a Smiley aerial and went down the right sideline for 67 yards to set up the visitors second TD, with QB Hendrix going over from the three yard line following a 15 yard aerial the Ouachita field general had tossed to Mahoney. Hendrix again kicked the extra point and the visitors now ahead 14 to 6 were never headed.

Crow's interception setting up the second Ouachita TD took some of the spark out of the Bobcats because they were knocking at the goal line themselves following a 50 yard sprint up the middle by Terry Don Thurman who was pulled down from behind on the Lion 15 yard line. The Cats were trailing 7 to 3 at the time Terry Don was pulled down by Ervin Bates speedy Lion end and linebacker. This proved to be the last Hope threat of the night.

On the short end of a 14 to 6 score midway in the 4th quarter the Cats naturally elected to receive following the second Ouachita TD. King returned to the Hope 37 yard line and on the first play from scrimmage following the KO the Bobcats fumbled with the Lions recovering on Hope's own 35 yard line.

Mahoney, big Ouachita Parish FB, made 15 for a 1st and 10 on the Hope 15 yard line and on the next play Hendrix, a heady, speedy QB all night, skirted his own right end for the final 15 yards and Ouachita's last TD of the night. Hendrix kicked his third straight conversion for the point after bringing the score to 21 to 6 in favor of Coach Ellen's visitors.

The first half was a see saw affair with the Lions holding a slight edge in running and passing. Both sides soon settled down to a kicking duel between rival ends who were doing the punting for their teams.

Work Starts on Little Rock Bldg.

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Work starts today on a new, 7 story federal building here.

The structure, which will house 13 federal agencies, is expected to be completed in 1961. It will cost $5,671,400.

Robert E. McKe Construction Co. of Dallas is contractor on the job.

Site of the new building is just west of the present federal building.

Larry Vaughn for the Bobcats and Ervin Bates, LE for the Lions. Even the kickers pretty well stood each other off with Vaughn kicking six times during the game for a 33 yard average while Bates booted five for a 38 yard average.

Overall yardage gained proved to be closer than the score with the Bobcats total offense showing 103 yards compared to 214 for the Lions.

In rushing yardage the Cats had a decided 161 to 121 advantage but Hendrix's aerials yielded 93 yards on 6 of 12 completions compared to Smiley's one of 6 for 12 yards with one interception.

Four charter buses from Monroe brought the Ouachita Parish Band and the Lionettes a snappy drill precision group of girls. The band and the Lionettes, as well as the Bobcat band, put on a good show during the half.

But the man who waited for them was neither indolent nor at their approach, a genial smile on his thick lips. He was short and fat, like his mother, but his hair was red, flaming in the sun, like a coxcomb, which explained his nickname. The Rouser. El Gallo looked at Mallory with a successful businessman's

He announced, "I am Estudillo, El Gallo. And you, I presume, are Mr. and Mrs. Latus Sutton."

Before either Mallory or Cloris could confirm this, Cagigas spoke casually from his watchdog position behind them. "No, Jose — they're lying. The girl is named Howard and works for the American border authorities. I suppose the man does, too."

In the moment of silence that followed, Cloris looked around and rather surprisingly in this realm of arab sagebrush. Surrounding all was a high and thick hedge.

Ramon stopped the taxi beside the iron gate which bore a pretentious coat of arms. "Do you wish me to wait?"

"That won't be necessary," Mallory said. "We're staying here, remember?"

"Ah, that is so," Ramon admitted. "I'm afraid I have a very bad memory. You are Senor Estudillo's friend."

As they reached the broad porch, Clavis seized Mallory's arm. "I can't do it, Rose, please," Mallory said quietly. Cloris blinked, startled. "Smith in case they're watching us. And listen. It's too late to back out without spoiling the show. You've been bellyaching about wanting to be treated like a man so don't fall back now on being a woman. Keep smiling, darling. Because if you blow the bit, I promise you I'll break that pretty little neck of yours."

Through her set smile, Cloris snapped, "Just try it, Tarzan." But the anger was good for her, since it washed away the incipient panic.

His suspicion that their approach had been observed was borne out by the speed with which the door swung open. However, they were not greeted by an armed guard, as Cloris had expected, nor by a servant, which would have been more likely. Instead the doorkeeper was a woman, a sweet and plucky matron dressed in severe black. She eyed the visitors distrustfully as Mallory introduced himself. "What do you want here? I don't know, Senor Sutton."

"We have some business with El Gallo."

"My son is retired," The woman moved as if to shut the door. Mallory leaned casually against it. "I don't blame you for being cautious. Senora Estudillo. It's true that you don't know us and neither does your son. But we do have some mutual regard for a good profit." As he talked, he pulled out a forged copy of the cablegram that Datus Sutton had received from the Kaiser-Rum. He didn't offer it to the woman but held it negligently where she could see it.

Senora Estudillo read the cablegram. From her complete lack of expression, it was impossible to tell whether it had any significance for her. She grunted. "Well, we'll see. Wait here," Mallory allowed her to close the door, leaving them alone on the porch with their luggage.

When the door was reopened, El Gallo's mother was accompanied by a man. He was a slender but well-muscled youngster with sleepy eyes and black hair brushed straight back. Despite the warmth of the day and the custom of the country, he wore a sport jacket over his polo shirt, which Cloris guessed meant that he was carrying a gun.

The young man held the cablegram between thumb and forefinger. He said, "Where did you get this?"

"The usual way. It was sent to me by Steve. You remember Steve, don't you?"

"I'm very bad on names. You say yours is . . ."

"Sutton. This is my wife."

"Of course." The young man held the door open for them to enter. "We don't mean to be impolite. It's just that we get so few visitors, we don't know how to act. My name, by the way, is Cagigas."

To ease the tension she glanced around the large entry hall and commented brightly. "What a lovely home you have, Senora Estudillo — so cool and restful."

"Thank you," the old woman said without cordiality.

Cagigas' attention had been entirely for the man but now he shifted his gaze to Cloris for a brief but unburied inspection. "Your first trip to La Paz, Mrs. Sutton?"

"Why, yes. When Datus decided to come down here on business, I insisted that he bring me along, as a sort of vacation, you know. We haven't had a real vacation in years."

"You speak Spanish very well," Cagigas said thoughtfully. "You plan an extended stay, then?"

"That depends on El Gallo," Mallory said. "When do we see him?"

"Immediately. He's waiting for you on the terrace. If you will kindly follow Senora Estudillo"

But the man who waited for them was neither indolent nor at their approach, a genial smile on his thick lips. He was short and fat, like his mother, but his hair was red, flaming in the sun, like a coxcomb, which explained his nickname. The Rouser. El Gallo looked at Mallory with a successful businessman's

In the moment of silence that followed, Cloris looked around and saw that she had been right. Cagigas had a pistol under his coat. But now he was holding it in his hand.

Chapter XXIV

Cloris couldn't have spoken if her life depended on it and at this moment, when it seemed to her she stood numb with fear. Her only hope was Mallory. She waited for him to deny the accusation, to do something that would save them.

He laughed. "Well, there goes your old ball game."

She was unable to believe that he had surrendered so lamely. El Gallo appeared equally surprised. "You admit the deception?"

"Why not?" Mallory said. "Your boy's got us dead to rights. We work for the U.S. government. No use kidding around. This is Dr. Cloris Howard and my name is Mallory."

El Gallo had to pause to sneeze. Finally, he muttered, "I must admit, you astonish me. Either you are very courageous or you don't understand the position you're in. You came here attempting to deceive me and laugh when you are found out. I assure you, this is no laughing matter, Mr. Mallory."

"Dr. Mallory," Mallory said and Cloris looked at him. "Doctor or mister, it makes no difference."

Mallory laughed again. Put your gun away," he advised the young man. "You're not going to use it on us."

Cagigas' cold expression didn't change but El Gallo looked curious. "Is that so? What makes you think that?"

"Because there's no profit in it. You can't do you any harm, here in your own country, but you kill us and you're in a mess that doesn't gain you a thing. Always heard you were a pretty shrewd operator. So suppose we talk business."

And Mallory seated himself comfortably on the lounge. Cloris did the same.

El Gallo asked, "What business could we possibly share?"

"Your life," Mallory said. "El Gallo hesitated. "All right—I will listen."

"Alone, if you don't mind," Mallory added apologetically to Cagigas and the old woman. "You see, this is a highly secret matter."

El Gallo jerked his head at the other two. "Leave us — but not to far. Trust you won't mind if they keep us in sight."

Cagigas looked unconvinced but he stuck his pistol in the waistband of his slacks and sauntered to the far end of the terrace. He seated himself warily on a tiled coffee table. Senora Estudillo went back into the house.

"You have a cold," Mallory said sympathetically.

El Gallo said impatiently, "I have a cold every winter. Is this the highly secret matter?"

"Perhaps I'd better let Dr. Howard explain," Mallory said, to Cloris' consternation. She was sure it was pure devilry on his part since she had no idea where he was heading. But he took pity on her. "Never mind. I can probably tell it better. Our mission here concerns some contraband cargo that passed through your hands several days ago, headed north. An American and two Italians, also a chimpanzee."

"Admitting nothing, how does this concern my life?"

"These men were also carrying a dangerous and contagious disease—plague. Dr. Howard and myself work for the public health service of our country. That's why we came down here—to save you."

El Gallo made a derisive sound. "The United States loves me so greatly that they're flying here to care for me?"

It sounded ridiculous to Cloris too, but Mallory wasn't fast. "We want to know the route the three men took, and their probable whereabouts now, so that we can stop them before they spread the disease any farther. Tell us that, and we're prepared to help you."

El Gallo's beady eyes were inscrutable. "How?"

"We have vaccine where we can reach it quickly. There's very little of it in existence. You cooperate with us and we'll inoculate you, you keep from catching the plague. Otherwise—" Mallory shrugged — "I'm afraid you're going to die."

"Everybody dies," Cloris saw her opportunity. Earnestly, she said, "So far, everyone who has handled the contraband has died. A whole shipful of sailors, the launch captain who brought it to La Paz, a boy in a village north of here . . . She hesitated, struck with an inspiration. "And the first symptoms is a cold in the head."

Mallory gave her an admiring glance but El Gallo didn't seem to be impressed. He mused, "Yet apparently the men most closely associated with it are still alive. I find that very strange."

"There's no proof of letting the course of any disease, much less the plague. Always a certain small number go unaffected for no good reason. But those are poor odds to play."

El Gallo was shaking his head. "It's a very clever story but no more truthful than your first one. I'm afraid you have misjudged me. I do not frighten easily. Nor do I do business with the law."

Cagigas came forward to usher them out. They left to the sound of El Gallo's strenuously blowing his nose. Their luggage was still sitting beside the front door. Cagigas said, "Take my advice and don't return. You are very lucky."

El Gallo does not like to be tricked."

The battered black taxi was still parked where they had left it, and Ramon was dozing at the wheel. Mallory woke him up. "I told you not to wait. Didn't you believe me?"

"Not exactly. You see, I know that El Gallo has no friends."

LIFE

... what is it? Here, it is represented in the newborn. Generally speaking, "it is a vapor that appears for a little while and then is gone," James 4:14. Life from birth to seventy seems a very long time. But brother, reverse the sentence and take a look... seventy back to birth is so very short. Anyhow, the value of a life is determined by how well it is lived and not by how long it is. Every worthwhile life consumes itself serving others... administering to the sick, giving to the poor and challenging them to prepare for the Life Eternal. The good life is full of little deeds made meaningful by a few Godly decisions. Then attend worship services regularly.
